The Tel Aviv Centennial

*“Wenn ihr wollt, ist es kein Märchen” –
“If you will it, it is no dream”.*

These words were written by Benjamin Theodore Herzl, in the summer of 1895, introducing the idea of a Jewish State. Herzl expressed his ambition to establish an exemplary land for the Jewish people built upon a tolerant, pluralistic, and progressive society. Interestingly enough, the economic capital of the future state was not to be Jerusalem but a new city—one with elaborately described social, cultural, industrial, technological, economic, demographic and urban spheres.

Herzl’s dream city would soon arise—and manifest itself as the City of Tel Aviv.

Tel Aviv was originally established as a neighborhood of Jaffa and not as a separate entity. In April 1909, a “Seashell Lottery” was held during the Passover holiday in which plots of land in the new neighborhood were divided among the founding families. The 60 families—approximately 200 men, women and children – gathered in a sandy, desolate area not far from the seashore. Akiva Weiss, chairman of the new neighborhood, collected 60 white and 60 gray seashells. Weiss wrote the names of the families that purchased the first 60 plots on the white seashells and the number of each plot on the gray seashells. The seashells were then placed in two hats and a boy and girl took out one gray and one white seashell from the respective hats, matching families and their new plots of land.

Since the establishment of Tel Aviv 100 years ago, the city developed in ways the original settlers had never imagined.

Today, Tel Aviv’s residents number just under 400,000, yet on any given day, nearly 2,000,000 people can be found in the city—that’s nearly a third of the entire population of Israel. It is Israel’s economic hub, home of the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange, many corporate headquarters and R&D centers. It accounts for 15% of the nation’s employment, hosts 40% percent of its finance industry and 25% of business services.

A century old and the product of many shaping forces and streams, Tel Aviv is imbued with the cultural heritage of the groups that built it. A new city in an old country, it was the place where “the different” took place, where openness for the new was abound. As a result, it is Israel’s business hub, financial, social and cultural capital. It is a center of education and the arts and home of Israel’s leading museums, orchestras, and theaters.

Tel Aviv's beaches, hotels, cafes, upscale shopping and lifestyle have made it a popular international tourist destination. It has a diverse composition of residents, young and old, religious and secular, students and professionals, rich and poor— the city has something for everyone.

In 2003, UNESCO declared Tel Aviv “The White City” —a world heritage site. Nicknamed “The White City” for its over 4,000 buildings that were built in the modernistic, eclectic and Bauhaus styles whose most prominent feature is the color white.

In the past 100 years the City has played a crucial role in the evolution of the Jewish State, from the place of the announcement of our independence to the central role she plays in economic, political and social life today. We can all certainly be proud of all that has been achieved over the last century and look forward to an even brighter future.

If Herzl were to wake and see the City of Tel Aviv, he would certainly be pleased that his dream has become reality.

Dear Harvey and Josh,

The City of Tel Aviv and I are grateful for your friendship, leadership, devotion and inspiring vision.

Since your first project in 2001, a pre-kindergarten in Jaffa, through the Library and Resource Center, Music Appreciation Center, Gymnasium and finally the School for Computer Science at the Academic College of Tel Aviv – Yafo, your partnership has meant so much to Jaffa and the surrounding areas as well as to excellence and coexistence in our community.

Harvey, the Ironi Zayin High School you adopted has produced immense change and growth. The number of dropouts from the school was 35% in 2000, and today it stands at 8%. The amount of students who have “open files” with the police reduced from 40% to just under 10%. On Yom Hazikaron, Jews and Arabs stand side by side as the siren sounds to remember our fallen soldiers. This is a model not only for Tel Aviv – but for all of Israel. These facts prove that the right education with the proper resources make a difference. Harvey, you gave so many the opportunities to serve their country and community proudly and productively.

You promoted understanding and cooperation; you provided a home away from home.

Josh, the new campus for the Academic College of Tel Aviv has been one of my dreams. Your support for that dream has kept us moving in the right direction regardless of all the external factors around us. The Weston School of Computer Science allowed us to unite all the existing faculties of the college that were previously spread out all over the city in various buildings. Your faculty today educates 1,300 bright young minds and at the same time hosts another 600 who are enrolled in the political science faculty until they will have a new space to move to. Moving the entire college campus to Jaffa has created a ripple effect. Students are now populating the nearby areas. What was once an impoverished neighborhood is now filled with cafes and restaurants. Buildings are being renovated and stores are opening to serve the growing young population. You “forced” me to pave the sidewalks, create better infrastructure and focus more on Jaffa. The Academic College helped inject a youthful and vibrant community in a very depressed area – completely altering the fabric of an insulated neighborhood.

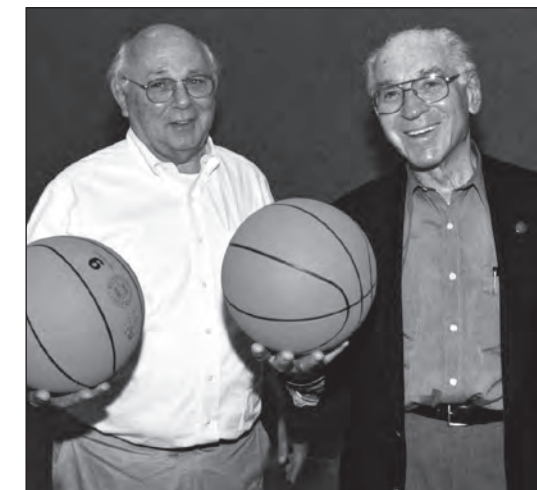

Harvey and Josh, you did not just create a few projects in Jaffa. Your projects planted a seed of change that has already begun to bear its fruit. What was once one of the worst areas in the Tel Aviv – Jaffa Municipality, is now part of a growing and positive snow ball effect of change.

There is no doubt that if it were not for you, none of this would have been possible. I cannot think of two more deserving honorees during the Tel Aviv Centennial year, as you have turned out to be the initiators of the next 100 years of growth and success.

With deep gratitude and friendship,

Ron Huldai

Dear Josh and Harvey,

Thank you for your belief and participation in the Tel Aviv Foundation's mission.

Through your dedicated support, you have made an indelible mark on the future of the State of Israel.

You gave opportunities, through the unique and important projects you created, to both the weak living in the impoverished neighborhoods of Jaffa and to the gifted who study at the Academic College of Tel Aviv – Yaffo.

Your holistic vision has proved that when given a chance anyone can succeed in life if they have the proper backing and support. The educational institutions you helped create are that backing that have thus far transformed thousands of lives in Tel Aviv – Jaffa.

I am grateful for your continued support and steadfastness – especially in these challenging times.

I congratulate you both on being selected as the Centennial Honorees.

In friendship,

The Tel Foundation wholeheartedly thanks Boaz Vaadia for his donation of the 'Hanna & Shemu'el' sculpture in bronze and bluestone to be auctioned this evening. 100% of the proceeds will be donated to the Centennial Projects - created from tonight's event.

Boaz Vaadia is a world renowned sculptor whose timeless, evocative stone figures now inhabit cultural sites, art galleries and private collections. As major installations at prime buildings, parks and homes around the world, they set a tone of peace and serenity in our increasingly conflicted world.

Born and raised in Israel, Vaadia moved to New York City in 1975 thanks to a grant he received from the America-Israel Cultural Foundation. In 1989 he moved his studio to Williamsburg, Brooklyn where he has been working since.

Another sculpture by the artist, 'Asa & Yehoshafat', will be installed next month in Tel Aviv's Independence Park, the artist's first piece to be installed in Israel. The park was recently redesigned and revitalized through the generosity of a Tel Aviv Foundation donor.

"It is a great honor to have one of my sculptures permanently placed in Independence Park Tel Aviv, Israel, the country I grew up in and which so profoundly shaped my artistic sensibility."
—Boaz Vaadia

About the Centennial Projects

Proceeds from tonight's event will be designated to one or more of the projects detailed here selected by the Centennial honorees, Harvey Krueger and Josh Weston. The City of Tel Aviv will match all donations, doubling the impact of your contribution.

Thank you for helping the Tel Aviv Foundation establish these important community projects.

New Library Plus Modern Internet and Software Resource Center at Gretz Elementary School

BACKGROUND

Established in 1934, the school is located in the center of Tel Aviv and serves 430 students from underprivileged families in 16 classrooms with outdated resources. The student body and its needs are diverse: approximately 25% are gifted children arriving from all areas of the city, another 10% have diagnosed learning disabilities or are in need of learning and emotional support. A high percentage of the students reach the required scholastic level and above, while a small percentage is below average.

The existing small library is outdated and does not provide the modern resources that a student needs in order to excel in today's world.

THE SCHOOL LIBRARY AS A RESOURCE CENTER

The new library will afford students with the latest educational and research tools that encourage interactive learning.

THE PROJECT

The Library and resource center will be expanded to 1,400 square feet and will include:

- Reading hall
- Computer area
- Periodicals and books display
- Librarian desk
- Periodicals recreation area
- Shelves for 4,500 books (2,700 reading and 1,800 reference books)
- Bag storage lockers
- Area for meetings and screenings
- Projector from the ceiling and screen

New Park and Playground in Southern Tel Aviv

The neighborhood's 23,000 low income residents are evenly divided between young couples, elderly and new immigrants who arrived in the past decade from the former Soviet Union, mainly from the Asian Republics. There are approximately 1,000 children under the age of six living in this neighborhood.

THE NEED

As most of the neighborhood's residents live in small spaces, outdoor space represents a crucial element to their quality of life. A modern park and playground will provide meeting places, seating areas and open play space where residents can socialize, rest, enjoy picnics, performances, birthday celebrations and much more.

THE PROJECT

There is 1.25 acre of open land with beautiful trees in the middle of the neighborhood. The plan is to create a park with green space and a safe playground for children, lawns, benches, lighting, sidewalks, bushes and flowers.

BACKGROUND

The Hatikva - Ha'argazim neighborhood was established in 1955 for immigrants predominantly arriving from Arab countries and who previously lived in transit camps. It is comprised of blocks of 1-2 bedroom apartments of an average size of 600 square feet.

The surrounding environment was not developed for years and recently became a top priority for Tel Aviv's Mayor, Ron Huldai.

The Hemda Center for Science Education—"Adopt a Class"

BACKGROUND & MISSION

The Hemda Center for Science Education was established in 1991 by the Rothschild Foundation in cooperation with the Municipality of Tel Aviv and the Weizmann Institute. Hemda's objective is to provide high quality physical science education to all talented 10th through 12th grade students in Tel Aviv who choose to major in Physics and chemistry. It is led by an elite team of educators from Israel's top research institutions such as the Weizmann Institute, Tel Aviv University and the Technion Institute of Science.

METHODOLOGY AND HEMDA GRADUATES

Hemda's teaching approach utilizes hands-on team settings where teachers demonstrate practical matters using sophisticated laboratories. Students selected for Hemda are the most gifted in the city.

Hemda graduates have been tracked and surveyed to assess the effectiveness of the Center: 70% of the surveyed students were recruited to the IDF's elite intelligence units that specialize in R&D 18% of the surveyed students were recruited to other choice IDF units such as the air force and paratroopers 12% of Hemda graduates were recruited directly to the highly selective ATUDAH program, whose participants defer their military service to attend medical and engineering schools and then serve an extended military service in their field.

THE NEED

During the 2008/09 school year, Hemda had 1,310 students studying science at the center. Due to loss of private and public funds stemming from the economic recession, Hemda was forced to reduce its students which now stands at just over 1,000. It is imperative to bring these talented students back into the program.

The Tel Aviv Foundation 1977 – 2009

Since 1977, the Tel Aviv Foundation has catalyzed donors to be strategic partners in supporting the evolving needs of the Tel Aviv community. The Foundation generates momentum to the city as the beacon of progress by elevating the quality of life through: education, culture and arts, sports, the environment and social services.

The Foundation works in partnership with the Municipality of Tel Aviv—Jaffa, which provides matching funds for nearly every project. The priority projects are set by Mayor Ron Huldai (the Foundation's International Chairman) and the City Council. Responsible and Purposeful, the Foundation provides for the needy, and creates opportunities for a better future for Tel Aviv and all of Israel.
